

The Rose

Kurt Venables

A thousand beams of celestial light
Rain through sparse clouds of pearly white
A thousand dreams the rays delight
Upon a bud, each will alight

A budding grain of gnosis glows
And though it struggles through its throes
Left in the rain, it sprouts and grows
Until the heart becomes a rose